School Vision & Mission
To promote professional development and quality teaching which, in turns, improve teachers’ practice and hence resulting in the betterment of students’ learning process.
Where We Are Now

In recent years, a culture of continuing professional development (CPD) has been thriving among teachers in Hong Kong. We, teachers, also have to act in accordance with the document “Learning to Learn”.

Our Strengths

• A team of young and energetic staff
• Student-focused staff
• Most staff willing and ready for help
• Relatively staff staffing

Our Weaknesses

• More co-operation and team spirit among staff needed
• Enhancement in teachers’ professional development
• Informal staff appraisal
• New teachers induction needed
• Collaboration and communication between teachers of different subjects needed

Our Opportunities

• Most of the staff listen to different opinions and accept criticisms.
• There are experienced and quality teachers in the school. Through lesson observations by peers, their skills can be shared with other teachers, particularly new teachers, and teaching effectiveness can be boosted. New teachers’ new teaching methods can also inspire other teachers so that every teacher can work towards further improvement.

Our Threats

• Some of the staff have already been teaching in the same school for many years. On the one hand, inertia may have developed; on the other hand, some of them may have other more important priority apart from teaching in their life. Motivating them to try new teaching strategies or to pursue continuous professional development may be difficult.
• New teachers may not have developed necessary teaching and classroom management skills.
Major Concerns for 2003/04 – 2005/06 (in order of priority)

1. To strengthen staff appraisal in school

2. To strengthen professional development in school

3. To enhance students’ project learning through the co-operation and communication of teachers of different subjects

| 1. To strengthen staff appraisal in school | • To help teachers identify strengths and weakness for further improvement
• To assist in planning in-service training and professional development of teachers individually and collectively
• To provide help to teachers having difficulties with their performance, through appropriate guidance, counseling and training.
• To enhance overall management of schools | • Class observation should be conducted every year. Peer observation is strongly encouraged by the school to develop an atmosphere where teachers can learn their strengths from each other.
• Heads of panels and committees are encouraged to assist and support their team members in various aspects | ✓ ✓ ✓ |
